

CONFIDENTIAL INFORMATION

ICBA delegates and committee members are obligated to maintain the confidentiality of meeting materials and discussions. Materials provided to ICBA delegates and committee members contain confidential information and are solely for examination and use in your capacity as a delegate or committee member of ICBA. No part of this information may be distributed to, or discussed with, third parties except ICBA staff with a need to know, or used by you for any purpose other than to provide advice and assistance to ICBA in connection with your role as a delegate. Any other disclosure or use of this information will be considered a breach of your duties of good faith owed to ICBA, including the duties of loyalty and due care. Among other things, the duty of loyalty requires that delegates and committee members act independently in their decision making and be free of interests that compete or conflict with those of ICBA. Any breach of these duties may cause monetary and other damages to ICBA.

When you complete your review of the meeting materials, please return them to ICBA or destroy them.
